Samet Nangshe Viewpoint in Phang Nga

The Samet Nangshe Viewpoint is very beautiful during the day but it is even more beautiful when the sun rises, 800-metre-high viewpoint offers beautiful panoramas of the surrounding scenery and the vast expanse of the Phang-Nga Bay with its still, turquoise waters, and backdrop of striking, craggy limestone peaks towering over vivid green mangrove forests. At dawn, as the sun’s first rays begin to illuminate the coastal vista, visitors can see the fisherman contentedly starting their daily routines and this remarkable and inspiring scene often stays embedded in the memory of tourists long after they leave.

New unseen attractions of “Isaan” Thailand

Thailand’s northeast beckons with many off-the-beaten-track wonders. Here’s to the small, charming, and oh-so-unique Ban Prang Nakhon in Nakhon Ratchasima or Korat and the splendid rock pillars at Moh Hin Khao in Chaiyaphum.

Starting at Ban Prang Nakhon, touted as Korat’s new unseen, centuries-old Thai houses and the ‘Barai Sawan’ bridge await. Those seeking positive energy should check into the Prasat Ban Prang, followed by rowing the local e-pong boat and munching on local delicacies.

Further north of Ban Prang Nakhon is Moh Hin Khao in Chaiyaphum. With its distinctive pillar rocks dubbed "the great sculptures of nature," this is another amazing, unseen destination awaiting your exploration. For more information, visit tourismthailand.org.
